Sometimes "normal" is beyond reason.

When I was in this room I was very scared and all the people around it reminded me of weird aliens and the thought that we are not alone

VERY VERY HAUNTING. I REALLY ENJOYED ALL ASPECTS OF THE EXHIBITION!

WALKING ON THE PLYWOOD AND BEING ALMOST "INTERACTIVE" WITH THE FIGURES, LIFE LIKE, IN THE ROOM WILL BE PERPETUALLY MEMORABLE!

THANKS TIM!! ☺

It is truly astonishing how the experiences and deep levels of pain and passion can influence and manipulate a dimension of art that filters through human existence - we can appreciate Zipcode / Código Postal such horrible history/beauty.

GUILT. Guilt is what I felt after experiencing 'Mother, the RESPONSIBILITY. CHANGE.

Remembering that I have a voice....

Thank you, Tim Shaw, for this installation.

me & my wife think this is all amazing and have a very clear message to us and how we think about each other; to work together to succeed or to all fail (like we are doing now)

were scary but helps bring out the purpose of them.

I THINK ART W/O A MESSAGE ISN'T ART. SOMETHING LIKE THIS EXHIBIT CHANGES THE WAY YOU THINK.
THIS IS GOING TO HORRIFY ME FOR YEARS TO COME.

The "Mother, The Air is Blue, The Air is Dangerous" really touching. When I was looking at the coats, purses, and gloves from people it really hit me that they were in trouble because they lost their belongings.

I will never forget the feelings and images from this exhibit. Especially enjoyed the live show and blue room. The details in all of the art was amazing and thought-

We are not Robots
because we can bleed.
We are born of the earth and the same matter.
Though the same can be said of a machine we feel the difference.

What is this deep human need to hate, create an opposition

It shows how ~~the~~ precarious life can be when terror strikes the ordinary. It captures a feeling of panic and helplessness when normal life is snatched away.
It's like the day Trump was "elected".

This exhibit is definitely one of a kind. The Blue Room had my heart racing.
I immediately fell in love with his work. Once I saw the first piece, I knew I had to see more & learn more about this artist.

The sense of fearfully running in circles after the terrorist blast gave me a true sense/feeling of the confusion and fear the people felt. Where to run? Where is the bomb?
Will another one follow?
Can I find my loved ones?
What is missing is the human death. It is suggested but thankfully not seen here.

Thank you Jim Shaw for using your talent to talk about things others aren't willing to talk about. Such a powerful message for such amazing art is what we need to finally face what is happening in the world right now.

"Middle World" is my favorite piece... I think of it often. I've been here 3 times now and every time I come around the corner I freeze. The size makes me feel like a child standing at the dinner table.
There is much I do not understand, but resonates deeply in imagery.

Beyond Reason is very thought provoking show. The Mother, The Air is Blue, The Air is dangerous brought me to the actual event and the eerie feelings from the event. I can't imagine being there at the top. The display itself was in a way frightening.

Very interesting use of a calm color (blue) to portray such an awful and chaotic event in history. The sound playing behind the piece creates an eerie feeling, almost like you're stuck, floating underwater for an eternity.

I was very moved by the robot clown, truly amazed that a machine with a voice could come across as wise, tired, aware of integrity and its importance. The voice alone, had it been a recording only, would also have seemed wise, but the eyes, movements of the head, and overall form/shape of the body gave a much more enhanced reality than a voice alone. Quite an impression to walk away feeling moved and return that feeling, knowing it's a machine made to be as human as possible.

As a species, humans suck! But no problem... denial of climate change guarantees that we will
